Formulation of an optimal Eco Industrial Park Model for the South Asian Region, Identifying Barriers, Potentials, and best practices

Purpose of Study:

The purpose of the study is to develop an optimal eco-industrial park (EIP) model tailored to the South Asian region, with a specific focus on Sri Lanka. The Ph.D. research aims to address the challenges faced by South Asian countries, such as resource shortage, financial limitations, and regulatory limitations, by identifying potential obstacles and best practices for sustainable industrial development. It tries to find and incorporate circular economy principles, industrial symbiosis, and renewable energy opportunities to support resource efficiency, lessen environmental impact, and improve socio-economic benefits. The research also aims to deliver innovative policy recommendations, financial models, and regulatory mechanisms to assist EIP development, contributing to the dual goals of economic growth and environmental sustainability. Eventually, the study aims to offer a replicable and contextually suitable solution for sustainable industrialization in South Asia.
